People House of Denver Presents “How To Make Love Work: A 21st Century Breakthrough in Relationships”

America’s top marriage and family guru, Terry Real, will appear at the Arvada Center on Saturday, October 13th

(CAMBRIDGE, MASS) — Relationships have changed. Men and women demand more than ever from their relationships. They want 50/50 partnerships and full-throttle intimacy, but they act like their parents or grandparents when marriage was about benign companionship and traditional gender roles. These 20th century skills are outmatched by the pace of today’s lifestyle and invasive cultural pressures.

Terry Real, one of America’s top marriage and family therapists and a multiple-national bestselling author, will appear at the Arvada Center on Saturday, October 13 from 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m. to present “How to Make Love Work: A Breakthrough Program for 21st Century Relationships.” People of every relationship and gender status are invited to attend the full-day workshop that will provide attendees a sophisticated tool kit to help turn their visions of modern love into a reality. He will also teach how to achieve full-respect living: the art of being assertive and getting what you want in a loving and supportive way.

People House, a Denver-based center for spiritual and personal growth invited Real to Denver to present this workshop. The event is being co-presented by the Relational Empowerment Therapists of Colorado, a group of marriage and family
